Wed

JAKARTA - The Governor of Lemhannas RI, Andi Widjajanto, was present as a guest speaker at the Town Hall Meeting with the theme "Tut Wuri Handayani: Encouraging and Finding Youth-style Political Models in Welcoming the 2024 Election" on Wednesday (8/3) at Graha Sabha Pramana, Gadjah Mada University.

The democracy index compiled by the Economist Intelligence Unit (EIU) for 2022 states that Indonesia's democracy score is 6.71, while the global average score is 5.29. "Indonesia's democracy score is above the average, but Indonesia has not been categorized as a nation with mature democracy," said Andi Widjajanto during the event organized by the Coordinating Ministry for Political, Legal and Security Affairs.

In order to mature its democracy, according to Andi Widjajanto, Indonesia must hold seven consecutive democratic elections. This was recommended by one of the studies conducted by the Political Research Center (P2P) of the Indonesian Institute of Sciences (LIPI). The Indonesia's 2019 election is its fifth, meaning that the 2024 and 2029 elections are the sixth and seventh. "In the 2029 election year, the democracy consolidation is considered complete, then in 2034, Indonesia's democracy will be mature," he said.

Another point that needs attention and is a challenge that must be faced is the trend of democratic regression that occurred from 2019 to 2022. Andi Widjajanto advised all students to know and oversee how democracy consolidation carried out in 2024 and 2029 is intended to reach democratic maturity by 2034.
