"... Surely we must learn to realize that the matter of community and state is a matter of men and women, and a matter of women and men. And the matter of women is a matter of community and state ...".

The above quote is the thoughts of Soekarno in his book titled "Sarinah, the Obligations of Women in the Struggle of the Republic of Indonesia" was the opening of the keynote speech delivered by the Governor of Lemhannas RI Prof. Dr. Ir. Budi Susilo Soepandji, D.E.A. on Monday (13/03/12) in a National Consultative event. The event was organized by the National Commission on Violence against Women in Kartika Chandra Hotel, Jakarta.

The event which lasted from March 12 to 15, 2012 was attended by 150 participants from the representatives of the ministries/state institutions, regencies/municipalities, regencial/municipal law firms, civil organizations, mass organizations and nongovernmental organizations from Jakarta and several other cities.

According to the National Commission on Violence against Women (Komnas Perempuan), by the end of 2011 there were 73 conducive policies and 207 discriminative policies towards women.

The discriminatory policies are considered to infringe on citizens' constitutional rights, such as the right to freedom from discrimination, right to equality before the law and in the government as well as other basic rights. They are also considered to result in eroded legal authority, which in turn may lead to disintegration of the nation and state, Indonesia.

Therefore, the governor, as a resource person at the event, said that the issues of discriminatory policies towards women need to be resolved wisely and cleverly in order to build quality and dignified Indonesian women.

"The conception of national resilience knows no gender difference in creating ideal conditions for national development. In the perspective of national resilience, the women in fact have a very important and fundamental role in creating quality national character" said the governor.

According to the governor, the dominant role of women within the family and household is considered highly relevant to the notion that the national resilience should be conditioned as early as possible starting from one's own family, neighborhood, workplace and nation.

Concluding his keynote speech, the governor expressed words of wisdom as a tribute to women "when you educated one man, you educated one person, when you educated one woman, you educated one generation".

The media and government are required to communicate the aspirations of various parties, and educate the youth organizations in understanding national values.

"The clashes that occur all these times are due to lack of communication between the government and society, especially when the government policies are not well received by the people. Therefore, the government should have a dialogue with mass and youth organizations in order to make the people aware of the policy and conflict that may occur among the villages and lead to greater conflict," said Sarman Situmorang, Chairman of the Central Executive Board of Generasi Muda Karya Pembangunan.

The discussion held under the cooperation between the LPP RRI and Lemhannas RI is expected to develop into effective channels of communication which raises people's aspirations to the government for a better Indonesia.

INDONESIA'S ROLE IN CREATING ASEAN'S SOCIO-CULTURAL COMMUNITY IN SUPPORTING NATIONAL RESILIENCE

On March 28, 2012, the Deputy for Strategic Studies Inspector General of Police. Drs. Herry Haryanto opened a roundtable discussion on actual study in the 3rd Floor, West Wing of Astagatra Building. The discussion was focused on the role of Indonesia in creating ASEAN Social Cultural Community and supporting the national resilience.

Indonesia's chairmanship of ASEAN, which ended in December 2011, has brought much important, strategic progress and achievement.

It is a form of recognition from the countries in the Southeast Asian region of the important role played by Indonesia as a country with a total area covering two-thirds of the Southeast Asian region. It is the most populous nation in the region with the richest natural resources.

As the largest power in the region, it is just reasonable for Indonesia to have a dominant interest and strengthen its active role in various fields in order to establish the ASEAN community by 2015.

The roadmap of ASEAN Socio-Cultural Community contains six work programs that should be implemented by all ASEAN countries, namely human development, social welfare and protection, social justice and rights, ensuring environmental sustainability, narrowing the development gap and building the ASEAN identity.

One of the things that are difficult to measure among the six programs is building the ASEAN identity. This is due to the fact that the ASEAN member countries have a complex geopolitics and geostrategy as well as diverse culture, ethnics and race with different levels of welfare.

In his speech read by the Deputy for Strategic Research Inspector General of Police Drs. Herry Haryanto, the governor expressed his expectation that the roundtable discussion should be able to produce formula and concepts that could be used as a reference in preparing policy recommendation related to the Indonesia's preparedness in creating ASEAN Community, especially in socio-cultural aspects.

The roundtable discussion was attended by structural officials, expert lecturers, expert analysts and expert professionals of Lemhannas RI. Acting as resource persons were the Chairman of the Doctoral and Master Study Program in International Relations of the Postgraduate Program of the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences of the Padjadjaran University Prof. Yanyan Muhammad Yani, Mair., Ph.D, Professor Dr. Bungaran Antonius Simanjuntak, Head of International Relations Program of the University of Indonesia Prof. Haryadi Wiryawan, Ph.D., Lecturer/Researcher of the Faculty of Social and Political Sciences of the University of Indonesia Lisman Manurung, Ph.D.
